Your Plant Habits — A

To increase the life span of your plants this summer, here are a few helpful gardening tips.

According to Decor America Inc., a leading manufacturer in the production of self-watering plant pots, most people's watering habits consist of either deluging plants with too much water or ignoring them for weeks.

To prevent gardening mishaps, experts recommend you plant indoor and outdoor plants in self-watering plantpots.

Indoor and outdoor plantpots water from the roots up, automatically combining the right amount of water and air to grow healthier flowers and shrubs.

Easy-to-use, these indoor and outdoor plantpots come fully assembled.

To pot plants, gardeners need only fill the capillary pillars with potting soil, tapping it down firmly before planting. As the plant uses the moisture in the potting mix, water is drawn up from the waterwell to the plant's root system by capillary action. Because

A New Vie

Now that many Americans are spending more time at home, they want more and more from their furnishings. That's why in many places, it's curtains for old-fashioned window treatments. In fact, a lot of homeowners are treating themselves to a new category of window coverings that combines the best features of shades, blinds, and curtains.

People who want it all can find the light control and privacy of a blind without the cold hard look;
